

Character's Backstory:

Ianmorn Trondhiem is a young-ish half-elf noble attending Kelmsmar College, a renowned college of magic and arts, attending bard classes(College of Lore). Ianmorn is chaotic good with an undecided faith. He makes an attempt to be kind to others at all times, despite their nobility or rank, and his main motivation is to win the approval of his family. His noble house is relatively small and is only known for their start as musicians in the city. Tragedy struck Ianmorn when his fellow classmate(We'll call him O) cheated on his midterm, resulting in Ianmorn and O failing the midterm and getting reprimanded. As a result of this, Ianmorn's noble house has ostracized him, considering him part of the family but refusing to pay for any more college. Meaning, Ianmorn is now in a rush to find the money to pay for his next semester whilst also holding a massive grudge against O. In this money fueled venture, Ianmorn came across the rest of the party, who all have their own personal quarrel with O. So now, Ianmorn has done many things with the party earning money and crafting a revenge plot on O. In our last session, Ianmorn finally acquired enough money to pay for his next semester and in a night of carousing and celebration he blacked out. Ianmorn woke up with no money in his pockets in the dead of night. Before he had a chance to mourn over that loss, the sky grew cloudy and started to rain a vicious red liquid, which was concluded to be blood. In a rush Ianmorn and the rest of the party began to make their way back to the Good Knight's Rest(the tavern they reside in), through rain of blood and viscera, and bunker down.